VANDERBILT-NEILSON WEDDING

CEREMONY IN NEWPORT IN A CHAPEL OF FLOWERS.

Miss Cathleen Nellson Becomes the Bride of Reginald C. Vanderblit-Brilliant Decorations at Arieigh-Bride Throws Flowers to Guests.

NEWPORT, R. I., April 14 .- A cold, disagreeable day with an overcast sky marked wedding of Miss Cathleen Neilson and Reginald C. Vanderbilt. At noon the hour set for the ceremony, the sun tried to force its way through the clouds to comply with the old adage, "Happy the bride the sun shines on," but, try as it would, it was without avail. Within the cottage, however, everything was joy and grandeur, and no bride ever had a more brilliant wedding than that of the young woman who is now the wife of the youngest sen of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt.

A wedding at Newport at this time of year brought out on the streets nearly the entire population, and it took all the local police force to keep the crowd at a distance from the cottage. For two hours before the time set for the wedding the streets about Arleign were completely packed with people, and it was with much difhat the carriages containing the guests made their way to the drive leading to the house. As the guests entered the house they beheld a scene of floral decorations which were commented on by many as the most claborate and beautiful that they

The floral show was not only beautiful but was undoubtedly the most original, ever seen at a wedding in Newport. Ar-leigh lends itself admirably to this kind decoration. The main hall, where the marriage ceremony was performed, was strikingly beautiful, thousands of Easter liles being used effectively in the decorations. The chapel in this hall, within which the bridal couple stood during the ceremony, was especially attractive. In this hall is a high and deep fireplace with pilasters of highly polished oak, and it was here that the chapel was erected, the depth of the fireplace giving a perspective.

The portal to the chapel was formed by use of huge spreading palms, the branches interlocking and forming a roof. The ceiling of the chapel was formed of vellow orchids and bunches of bride roses, while the background was of lilies of the valley. Within the chape! was built a platform, upon which Father Meenan, paster of St. Mary's Church, stood during the marriage ceremon y. Up to this platform led two steps, upon the lower of which Miss Neilson and Mr. Vanderbilt knelt while the officiating elergyman pro-nounced the benediction. The chapel effect was more fully carried out by the use of wax tapers placed in large gold can-

The front of the balcony and the side of the grand stairway were hidden completely by masses of Easter lilies forming a sort of terrace from the east room, in which the bridal procession was formed, to the chapel. Faster lilies in large clusters were placed n silver vases in the panels of the wall.

It was exactly at noon when the Franko orchestra struck up the strains of the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" and the oridal party, which had formed on the gallery on the second floor, marched down he broad stairway to the chapel. First came the ushers, Messrs. Jules Blanc Neilson, a brother of the bride; Ellis Adams, Orange, N. J.; Arthur S. Burden, New York; S. H. Stone, Syracuse; Peter Goelet Gerry, and Albert Gray, New York. They were followed by the bridesmaids, the Misses Isabelle May, Washington; Florence Twombly, a cousin of the bridegroom; Evelyn Parsons and Natalie Schenck of New York. The bride, Miss Neilson, followed, escorted by her uncle, Frederick

The procession proceeded to the floral chapel, at the entrance of which they were met by the bridegroom and his best man, his brother Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, and proceeding within the chapel, the ceremony was performed according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church by the Rev. William B. Meenan, pastor of St. Mary's, assisted by the Rev. Father Cronin and two altar boys. Eight minutes after 12 o'clock Mr. Vanderbilt and Miss Avelkon, were propounced man and wife. and two altar boys. Eight minutes after 12 o'clock Mr. Vanderbilt and Miss Neilson were pronounced man and wife and left the chapel smiling and happy to the strains of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" and proceeded to the south parlor, where they received the congratulations of their friends. The young couple stood under a huge canopy of white daisies, the canopy being flanked on the sides with masses of golden daisies. About the room were clusters of daisies placed in gold vases. The remaining rooms of the villa were profusely decorated with great bunches of American Beauty roses, palms, ferns and potted plants in flower.

The wedding gown of the bride was of white chiffon elaborately trimmed with rare old point lace. It had a long train with loose fitting sleeves and high collar. The only jewels worn were a string of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom. The bridal well was of old point lace and had been worn by the bride's grandmother, mother and her sister, Mrs. Arthur T. Kemp. The bridesmaids were gowned also in white chiffon trimmed with white lace and wore large white picture hats with ostrich plumes. The bride's benguet was composed of man and ushers were diamond and pearl stickpins.

The flowers were tied loosely with white satin ribbon with long streamers. The bouquets of the bridesmaids were white Persian lilacs tied with white satin ribbon. Persian lilacs tied with white satin ribbon. The bridegroom and best man and ushers were boutonnières of gardenias. Bay trees and tall ferns about the yard gave the villa a festive appearance. The bride's gifts to her attendants were gold heartshaped lockets suspended from gold chains, while the gifts of the bridegroom to his best man and ushers were diamond and pearl stickpins.

A novel feature of the wedding and one which originated with the bride was the distribution of the flowers of the bridal bouquet. After the reception, and just prior to the breakfast, while the guests were still in the main hall, the bride mounted to the gallery and, loosening the satin ribbon which lightly bound the bouquet together, cast the flowers among the guests. There was a great scramble to secure the coveted souvenirs of the wedding.

Following the reception, which was brief, the wedding breakfast was served, the tables having been arranged in the dining room and hall while the guests were in the south parlor. There were two large tables, each seating sixteen guests, one for the bridal party and the other for the families immediately concerned, and sixteen small tables, each seating eight guests. With the exception of the bridal table the decorations were American Beauty roses. The tions were American Beauty roses. The bride's table was decorated with lilies of, the valley and bride roses. At the break-fast the bride cut the cake and it was placed n small boxes and distributed among the

Following the breakfast the bride retired and preparations were made for the going away. The young people at once planned for a hearty "send-off." The first that the crowd outside the cottage knew that Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt were about to start on their wedding tour was when Alfred G. Vanderbilt and a number of voung people appeared at the side door of the cottage. There was an immediate scramble for points of vantage, but this proved to be a ruse, because the bridal carriage drove to the main entrance and, amid a shower of rice and the throwing of the customary shoe, in this case it was a white satin slipper, Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt entered the carriage and were driven off, while the crowd gave three cheers for the happy couple. Trailing iskind the carriage for nearly fifty feet were streamers of white satin ribbon.

Mrs. Vanderbilt wore a tailor-made goingaway costume of blue with picture hat to match. They were driven out on the island to the Middletown station, where they boarded a private car attached to an engine and left for Boston. It is understood that Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt will stop at the Hotel Touraine while in that city and will remain there during the week, attending the Horse Show, in which Mr. Vanderbilt has horses entered. They will then return to Sandy Point farm for a brief visit and later sail for Europe. Mr. Vanderbilt's automobile left for Boston this evening for use while they are in that city.

After the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt from Arleigh the guests passed several hours at dancing, and late this afternoon left for New York by special trains. Mrs. Neilson will remain at Areligh during the remainder of the week, when she will remove to the Newman cottage, which she has taken for the season.

Late this afternoon the jewels and valuable gold and silver gifts of the bride were conveyed from Arleigh to the bank vaults, where they will be closely guarded until such time as Mrs. Vanderbilt wants them. During the ceremony at the cottage they were closely guarded by Chief of Police Richards and Detective Sheridan of New York.

SITE FOR ODELL MACHINE

ALL ITS LEGS TO BE PLANTED IN THE NEW CANAL.

When the $101,000,000 Is Squar Cheaper Rail Transportation Will Have Made the Canal Impossible as a Carrier-What It Devoured Last Year.

On the "neglected" canals the State spen last summer $1,512,748.73 for repairs, according to the report of the Comptroller on the canal funds which he paid out. This was more than any railroad in the State spent for similar expense and the New York Central Railroad has 2,829 miles of tracks in this State to the 350 miles of the Erie Canal.

Since the passing of the canal's usefulness was recognized in 1882, when the tolls were taken off, the State has spent more than $49,000,000 on it and still the ditch worshippers cry that the railroads have advanced beyond the canal because the canal has been neglected and has not been brought up to date.

In all that time, twenty years, the canals have turned into the State Treasury not a dollar of earnings while the two railroads that are supposed to be its conquering rivals have had to pay $37,000,000 in taxes in that twenty years, one of them paying last year a tax which amounted to $829 on each mile of track and it has a four-track route.

These figures point the truth of the state-ment that the canal is the most expensive way of taking freight to market. With the advance of railroads slow water transportation has taken its place with the stage coach. The coming of the 120-ton engine and the 100-ton car has forever eliminated the canal as a traffic bearer. Canals like the Suez Canal and the Soo, which connect two bodies of water, creating a shorter route by which large vessels may pass from one to the other and freight may be carried without breaking bulk, may pay; but a canal over 300 miles long cannot. Speed is out of the question because of the size relation of the body of water to the vessel and because of the locks made necessary by the different levels.

With the railroad which carries to New York in twelve hours is put in competition the canal, for which the highest estimate of its friends is that when improved by the expenditiure of $101,000,000 boats may make ten round trips in the year.

A Lake steamer lying at Buffalo can go to Chicago, reload and get back to Buffalo before a canalboat of to-day can pass from Buffalo to New York. An Atlantic liner can journey from New York to Liverpool while a canalboat is coming from Buffalo to New York. Such slow transportation, it is contended by the canal partisans, is a regulator of railroad traffic and freight

By the time the enlarged canal is completed, if the plan of the Davis bill should be put through, science will have made steps in motive power which will reduce the cost of railroading and put it in the power of the railroad to carry grain and freight at a price which the 1,000-ton barge of expense fixed forever cannot meet.

Yet many people will vote for the pro-posal next fall. The Odell machine is to be built up out of the ditch.

WHAT ABOUT FOREST PLEDGES? Adirondacks Association Wonders Why Odell Has Not Redeemed Them.

At the annual meeting of the Association for the Protection of the Adirondacks, held yesterday, the report of Vice-President Warren Higley showed the membership to be 1,054 and the treasurer's balance to be 1,054 and the treasurer's balance $9,640. These ten trustees were elected for three years: Henry Phipps, James MacNaughton, Col. A. G. Mills, J. Pierpont Morgan, Bishop Potter, Robert C. Pruyn, Whitelaw Reid, William G. Rockefeller, Titus Sheard and W. A. Rogers.

Legislation now pending at Albany affecting the Adirondacks was discussed, and there were outspoken expressions on the Water Storage bill and the neglect of the Water Storage bill and the neglect of the Legislature to make an appropriation for the continuation of the purchase of land in the Adirondack Park. This resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That this association condemns the bill now pending in the Legislature of the State of New York, introduced by Senator Lewis and known as the Water Storage Commission bill, as unnecessary, unwise and dangerous legislation, and a measure which threatens the Adirondack Park of this State; and that any measure which proposes the construction of dams for the prevention of floods should, by its terms, except the property within the lines of the Adirondack Park from its provisions.

Vernlanck Colvin, former Superintendent within the lines of the Adirondack Park from its provisions.

Verplanck Colvin, former Superintendent of the State Land Survey and the Adirondack Survey, was one of those who protested against the indeterminate provisions of the Water Storage bill. He evidently reflected the views of the meeting when he contended that before any scheme for water storage is authorized, the location of the reservoirs, the height of the water, the contour of the areas to be submerged, the expense of construction and many other details should be definitely known.

The secretary reported that the trustees had secured the introduction of a bill to continue the acquisition of land in the Adirondack and Catskill parks. Astonishment was expressed that the Legislature had not yet done anything toward keeping the pledges given by both political parties last fall in their platforms to resume the purchase of lands within these State preserves. It was remarked that Gov. Odell's majority of 8,000 last fall would probably have been much smaller if lovers of the forest had not believed that the promise of his party in this respect would be kept.

Among those present was Mrs. Horace See, an enthusiastic practical forester. Mrs. See is personally conducting experiments in forestry on her place at Glen Summit, Pa., where she is planting 1,000 white pine trees.

In the collection are wedding rings with sad histories, engagement rings with even more melancholy associations, rings and tiny lockets which have been worn by little children whose mothers now mourn, and trinkets with more costly gems. Each has some human interest attached to it. They are treasures which in many cases have been sacred to their owners, and money could not purchase them, so they have been given to be used in the making of the most sacred of all the vessels used in the Catholic ritual.

When enough jewels and gold have been collected Father. Doyle will have the trinkets melted, and from the gold and jewels the chalices will be made:

Found Parents Overcome by Gas.

Mr. and Mrs. John Rooney, an aged couple living on the third floor of 333 East Thirtyeighth street, owe their life to their son Joseph, who decided to go home to dinner vesterday through the storm. He found them both lying on the floor unconscious with the cock of a small gas stove turned on. They were resuscitated and taken to Bellevue Hospital.

LIQUOR MEN MILDLY PROTEST. | MRS. O'BRIEN FEARS SERVANTS.

ANGER OVER HIGH LICENSE SUB-DUED AT THEIR BIG MEETING.

o Boycott on Up-State Produce and No Formal Threat to Get Even, but They Announce That Their Political Attitude Depends on Business Interests.

The Wine Liquor and Beer Dealers' Central Association of Manhattan and The Bronx held its first meeting yesterday since the bill was passed to increase the cost of a liquor license from $800 to $1,200 a year. There were 300 members present and after a five-hour secret session the secretary read off to the reporters a string of very mild resolutions and declared that their adoption was all that had been accomplished. Nothing was said about boycotting New York State farm products and E. B. Taber, a representative of the butter, cheese and milk dealers, who went to the meeting, was as-sured that the liquor dealers, as a whole, had no intention of withdrawing their patronage from the up-State farmers.

The saloon men denounced Goy, Odell for securing the passage of the bill to increase the tax and Mayor Low for not protesting against it. Some very warm threats to kill the reform administration at the next election were simmered down to this decla-ration for the public:

ration for the public:
With reference to the announcement that we are going into politics we beg leave to state that we are men engaged in a business conducted under the laws of this State, that we have in our ranks members of all political parties whose attitude toward their respective parties is determined by the effect which party policy has on our interests. In this respect we differ from no class of our citizens. Another section of the formal statement was:

If there are evils arising from liquor traffic the evils are felt most in the localities where the business is carried on, so the revenue from it should be spent in those localities for educational, charitable and police purposes.

The other resolutions were to the effect that the new law would injure respectable saloonkeepers, benefit the dives and in-

sioner Woodbury's Inspection. Street Cleaning Commissioner Woodbury began his official inspection of his force of white wings" in Brooklyn yesterday by a visit to Stable C, Nostrand avenue, where he was received in true military style by his "army." With brooms and shovels over the right shoulders, and accourtements, such as sprinkling pots and paper "lifters," strapped to their backs, the men marched and countermarched, presented "arms" and behaved generally as a well-trained army should.

Major Woodbury expressed his pleasure at the precision of the drill as well as at the fine appearance of the men's uniforms and equipments. To-day Stable D will be inspected. Commissioner Redfield and other borough officials will be present to review CAN'T FIND BILLION IN COAL. President Truesdale of D., L. & W. Fears That It Isn't There.

President William H. Truesdale of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad said yesterday that his company had not as yet been able to find the $1,000,000,000 not as yet been able to find the $1,000,000,000,000 bed of coal which report discovered on Saturday last near-Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Mr. Truesdale appeared willing to receive furner and definite information as to the exact location of the coal.

"I am constrained to believe," added Mr. Truesdale," that the story is romance. We have been unable to find any basis for it."

The report of the find figured in detail that there were 300,000,000 tons of coal, that there were 300,000,000 tons of coal, and that the mining of this would provide employment for 6,000 men for some 200

CONSUMPTION HOSPITAL. Aldermen Favor It and Ask If It Will Abol the Scourge.

The Aldermen went on record yesterday as favoring the establishment of a hospital, near the city, for the treatment of consumptives. The resolution they passed requested the Commissioner of Charities to prepare a report on the estimated exto prepare a report on the estimated ex-pense and to make an application for the money necessary. The President of the Health Board was also asked to supply an estimate of the number of people in this city suffering from tuberculosis and to state whether, in case a hospital was es-tablished, "there would be scientific basis for the belief that consumption as a scourge —that is to say as one of the leading causes of death—could be abolished in this city, and if so, within what period of time."
